About Me Essay

My name is Ava Pace, and I am a University of South Carolina graduate. I majored in mass communications and double minored in business administration and hotel and tourism management. I am from Raleigh, North Carolina, originally, and went to a large high school. My high school experience inspired me to major in mass communication, especially from my experience of being a part of our morning news, one of, if not, the only high school that broadcasted their morning news live each morning in the state, and my three years of working on, and eventually leading my schools' yearbook team.

I strive to work in the news industry in the future, whether its writing copy or reporting on traffic patterns. I have always loved the work put into our daily news, and I have always wanted to be a part of a job I believe has value in how it helps people. Being a part of news creation, in my mind, is so important as that is how people stay informed both locally and worldwide. It has never been about what format of news for me, rather just knowing that my work is making a difference.

My portfolio delves deep into what experiences in the past four years I find made the greatest impact on me, whether it was figuring out how to work with a volatile team or learning how to be a leader on the job during my summer internships. The work I am most proud of is my time in Barcelona, where I created a website for my class to document the month-long trip and my peers' experiences throughout the program. This project not only shows my ability to work with any team, but also my ability to lead, organization, writing and website building ability, and my ability to collect data through mediums like interview.

In the future I hope to keep developing my skills, both the ones useful in the newsroom, as well as my people skills. I want to make connections with people of all different places and backgrounds, share stories I find important and inspiring. I believe that all of my schooling and efforts in and out of the classroom will be worth it as long as my work inspires at least one person someday. Thank you for taking the time to look through my portfolio, and please reach out!
